Building on existing strengths at the UvA in various social sciences, the Centre for Urban Studies aims to increase the exposure of ongoing research; to develop synergies that allow innovative and cutting edge-research ventures; and to bridge research and teaching/curriculum building. The Centre positions itself in the international academy on the basis of a niche in global comparative urbanism with a strong reference to its location in Amsterdam. It benefits from the worldwide appeal of Amsterdam but also responds to growing demand for a better understanding of urban processes around the world, from Shanghai to Sao Paulo, or from Mumbai to Johannesburg. This makes for a versatile niche in the field of urban studies at large.

The Centre's Advisory Board currently consists of 12 members; Zef Hemel joined in 2012. Today, the overall staff of the Centre consists of 39 researchers and more than 60 PhD students. In 2012, funds were allocated for the hiring of three new Assistant Professors in Urban Studies. Their assignment is to develop specific interdisciplinary research programmes with the expectation to submit major grant applications. Two of these hires are on two-year contracts (with the possibility of a steady appointment thereafter) and one is a permanent hire. Each hire involves collaboration of at least two existing programme groups so as to stimulate optimal synergy.

The Centre's healthy overall development is expressed in vigorous external research funding (a total of 18,2 million active funding at the present time; and a total of 5,6 million acquired funding during 2012), growing output in terms of publications (>100 refereed journal articles and a total of about 250 overall publications during 2012; compared to a total of 218 in 2011); and the development of institutional networks in the Netherlands and abroad along with the creation of new forums within the university (e.g., Urban Studies Lectures, Lunch Discussions) and in the city (e.g., Urban Movies). During 2012, we forged closer ties to the city of Amsterdam (at the highest levels) and with national policy researchers at PBL. We are confident that we are becoming more established in the city and beyond, in social and policy circles as well as in the academy. At the same time we are gradually establishing urban studies as a common field within the university, creating a sense of membership and identity.

2.1 Bridging Research and Education

Urban Studies Undergraduate Summer School: a 3-week course (6 EC) on the theme of 'Housing, People and City Spaces', taught in the summer of 2012. In this program students explored housing, planning and policy issues in European cities as well as consider how these apply in other regions of the world. With a focus on real urban contexts, the course examines subjects such as architecture and neighbourhood design, housing finance and policy, urban planning and sustainability, and the impact of household and demographic change. Amsterdam is one of Europe's most vibrant and attractive cities, providing a fascinating laboratory for the exploration and examination of urban issues. The course was directed and taught by Dr. Richard Ronald and colleagues from the Center for Urban with 22 international students participating, the Summer School has been a successful initiative, which will be run again in the summer of 2013.

Research Master Urban Studies: the research master is taught by the Centre's staff with various opportunities for the students to be engaged with ongoing research at the Centre.

Minor Urban Studies: this curricular program was designed and introduced by the Centre and a considerable part of the courses is taught by the Centre's researchers. It was started in the fall of 2012. The Minor consists of 30 ECs and is also available as a 'domain' (instead of a minor) to students working towards the BA degree in Interdisciplinary Social Sciences (Algemene Sociale Wetenschappen).

2.2 Challenges

1) Overstretch: the Centre has become known inside and outside the University and its relevance and appeal seem to be appreciated in many quarters. We are often asked to contribute, support, participate, or even organize events to such an extent that we must almost continuously strategize to decide what we do and don't do and what our priorities should be. It is often tempting to get involved but not always judicious to do so. See below for current collaborations that we have prioritized.

2) Lack of common space: currently, the research staff involved at the Centre for Urban Studies is housed at different UvA-locations. The Centre is clearly missing a physical location in which all staff can gather and that is open to (inter)national guests to visit. This hampers the coordination of the Centre, its visibility, its internal and external promotion, and the organization of synergistic activities like joint lunches, lectures and research meetings. For this reason, the Centre pleads for a common (space in a) building in which it is able to house all members of the Urban Studies research staff.

3) Challenge of forging a common identity where people have multiple 'loyalties' (disciplinary, departmental, etc).

In this project we draw on (and try to move beyond) the growing social science attention to physical objects, as taken up in Science and Technology Studies (STS) and Actor-Network Theory (ANT). We make use of these precedents, but take them public. We want to see how objects are actants in the public realm. Collaboration between prof. dr. Jan Rath, prof. dr. - Project: Markets & Diversity. In collaboration with the University of British Columbia (Vancouver) and the Max Planck Institute (Göttingen), the University of Amsterdam addresses a research question that centers on the impacts of cultural diversity on the nature and operation of street markets. What are the implications of street markets for cultural diversity? How do everyday encounters in markets contribute to (or undermine) this learning process? When people from different backgrounds get along in markets, is this indicative of larger social processes of civility or are these encounters specific and somehow exceptional?

4. Overige resultaten

Wat zijn de overige resultaten, direct toe te schrijven aan het zwaartepunt?

4.1 Talent recruiting

In 2012 the Centre recruited 3 assistant professors with highly regarded and competitive credentials (Van Gent, Jaffe, Vigneswaran). The recruitments are strategic positions in Urban Studies at the interface of existing disciplines or programme groups (e.g., planning/development studies, or sociology/political science). Urban Studies funding for these positions was dependent on sound interdisciplinary themes connecting existing research programmes, so as promote synergetic research agendas. The Centre initiated two additional searches in late 2012, to be completed in 2013.

4.2 Research Exposure

In 2012, we helped increase the visibility of urban studies through the promotion of research projects and related events not only among our research staff but also in UvA newsletters, media, on posters and the web. We maintain contacts with key persons of the Economic Board, BMA, PBL, DRO, O&S, Pakhuis de Zwijger, Arcam and Sarpathi to promote our events within their organization.

The exposure of urban studies at the UvA has also increased with our improved and now highly maintained website (www.urbanstudies.uva.nl). The daily number of visitors to the web site has roughly tripled from the end of 2011 to the end of 2012.

4.3 Events

The Centre for Urban Studies focuses on the interdisciplinary study of urban phenomena and urban processes and aims to develop synergies that allow innovative and cutting edge-research ventures and curricula. Through the launch of the Centre for Urban studies and the co-organization of international workshops Urban Studies has promoted interdisciplinary and international comparative research as well as contributed to the wide dissemination of output and expertise of UvA researchers. The Centre has also funded selected projects among research staff that are interdisciplinary, that are dependent on funding (i.e., are not likely to happen without our funding) and that have an identifiable end product.

A. Examples of Interdisciplinary research support

- Workshop to prepare ORA application – by Jan Rath
The Centre has given financial support in December 2012 and facilitated a workshop that has resulted in an ORA application: 'Mundane Objects in Public Space: A Comparative Cities Study'. Among the participants of this workshop were Sophie Watson, Harvey Molotch and Sharon Zukin. Product: a special issue of the Journal of Material Culture in May 2013.
- 'Authors Conference on New Urban Periphery' – international workshop by Willem Salet
The Centre has given financial support in December 2012 and facilitated a workshop organized by the research group Planning, Institutions and Transforming Spaces. Product: three special journal issues, to be published by the end of 2013.

B. International conferences (organization and sponsorship)

- Initiated in 2012 and in preparation: A major collaboration with gemeente Amsterdam and the VU, initiated by the Centre for Urban Studies: 18th of October, 2013: 'Amsterdam's Canal District in Global Perspective, Past and Present', symposium on the occasion of the 400th anniversary of the Canal District. A high-visibility public event with world-class scholars and participation of the mayor, rector magnificus, city aldermen, and others.
- 'A world of places, a world of cases.' International conference organized by students of the Urban Studies Research Master (2 November 2012).
- Seminar on 'Mixed Income Housing Research'. Organized by Sako Musterd (University of Amsterdam), John Mollenkopf (City University New York), Rob Sampson (Harvard University) to bring together senior and junior scholars from the U.S., the Netherlands, and elsewhere in Europe, who have been in the forefront of quantitative and qualitative research on how the larger dynamics of urban and metropolitan housing markets and neighborhood hierarchies are producing specific new kinds of patterns of group juxtapositions and to enable them to interact with a few of the most thoughtful urban policy makers and researchers in local and national government (e.g. Mei Ling Liem bestuursadviseur Bestuursdienst Gemeente Amsterdam, Jeroen Slot (directeur O&S), Andrée van Es (Wethouder Werk, Inkomen en Participatie, Burgerschap en Diversiteit, Bestuurlijk Stelsel) (4-5 June, 2012).
- Urban China Research Seminar - To discuss the barriers in adapting western contexts in both methodological and communicational perspectives, special guests: Prof. Benjamin van Rooij from the Netherlands China Law Centre at the University of Amsterdam and Prof. dr. Peter Ho from Leiden University (14 May 2012).
- Interdisciplinair Congres Amsterdam van het SVGB (studievereniging 'Beta Gamma') 'Metropolis, de stad van morgen' (12 April, 2012).
- Scenario's Conferentie 'Toekomstvoorstellen', Amsterdam Economic Board (13 Maart 2012).

C. Urban Studies lecture series

All visitors at the Centre need to provide a guest lecture in order to exchange of knowledge and research expertise and to stimulate international comparative research.
